Abstract of the Talk

Data is the new Oil". This is a one-liner used/misused quite liberally. Organizations have become more data hungry because they want their decision-making to be data-driven. Any data-related expertise commands a premium in the job market. But can organizations do anything with the mountain of data that they have? The question further takes a different flavour when the data relates to people, specially their personal data. Given this scenario, it is important to understand the basics of data protection. The webinar aims to discuss various dimensions and spectrum of data privacy including its threats and challenges.

All are welcome:
